ORIGINAL POETRY.

GAMBLING. of. ! Freemen, shun the tempting lure That backons you to sin.

But yet so black within. Let not the monster thus be fed Within our lappy land; Where Heaven its bountenances has apread With free and liberal hand.

That seems without so bright and pure,

Speen, spern the ignominious stealth, The road to vice and slame Be industry our guide to wealth, To hongur and to fame.

Let not the rankling serpent thus Twine round our building tree; Let not oppression weave for us A chain of misery.

Let honest means our thoughts employ To reap but what we sow; Nor build our hopes of future joy Upon our brothers' woe. Shan! Freemen, shun the treacherous game, While honour is your proudest name, And Liberty your b MINSTREL OF MANAYUNK.

> WEEP NOT FOR ME. Weep not for me, my love, Weep not for me; We'll meet in Heaven above; Where sorrows fice.

Sorrow and care will soon be o'er With this poor frame, And we shall meet, to part no more, Where love's the same.

O it is hard to part from those, Cherish'd so dearly; Who sympathized in all our woes, And lov'd sincerely.

Farewell! the dreary grave, Opens before me; Check, check those tears, nor bathe The cold sod o'er me.

Weep not for me, my love, Weep not for me; We'll meet in Heaven above, Where sorrows floo.

ANATHEMA.-TO

Deep is the curse the wretch should feel, Whose malice, on which vice hath smil'd, Could seek with damning lust to steel A father's heart against his child.

Who could a murderous pleasure find In blighting youthful hope and joy, And pouring on the troubled mind A double portion of alley.

My soul has wept that you should be The victim of such standerous wiles-Come to my heart, and find in me One who has little known of smiles.

Tis true, across my vacant face, The laugh of mirth will frequent start; But sorrow o'ten holds a place

Deep in the chambers of my heart. When temperts from and troubles shake, And gricls and cares alternate goad; Moments will come that seem to make

Our very life a weary load. Yet haply ere our sun shall set On us, my friend, one ray may shine-And the dark morning bring us yet
A day of cloudless light benign. OTHELLO.

OCEAN.

Unfathom'd deep, unfetter'd waste Of never silent waves; Each by its rushing follower chas'd Through uniffumin'd caves. And o'er the rocks, whose turrets rude, E'en since the birth of time,

Hath heard smid thy solitude The billow's ceaseless chime Through what recesses, depths unknown, Dost thou thy waves impel,

Where never yet a sunbeam shone, Or gleam of moonlight fell? For never yet did mortal eyes. Thy gloom wrapt deeps behold, And naught of thy dread mysteries, The tongue of man bath told.

What though proud man presumes to hold His course upon thy tide, O'er thy dark billows uncontroli'd, Ha fragde bark to guide-Yet who upon thy monotain waves the feel himself secure,

While sweeping o'er thy yawning caves, Deep, awful and obscure But thou art mild and tranquil now-Thy wrathful spirits sleep, And gentle billows calm and slow,

Across thy bosom sweep. Yet where the dim horizon's housel, Rests on thy sparkling bed; The tempest-cloud in gloom profound, Prepares its wrath to shed. Three milit and culm in youth's bright hour,

The tide of life appears: When fancy paints with magic power, The bliss of coming years. But clouds will ri-e, and darkness bring O'er life's deceitful way, Ind cruel disappositions.
Its blight on hope's dim ray.
CHISPIANUS.

LINES. I saw a female young and fair, She walked in conscious pride; A demon whispered in her car, She totter'd, feil and died.

I saw a youth with every grace, Approaching manhood's hour; He sink beneath the demon's grasp,

I saw a matron kind and meck, Her children by her side; The demon softly touch'd her cheek, She languished and died.

I saw a father and a friend, He was the best, the leat; The demon breath'd upon his brow, He fell beneath the blast.

I slow approach'd this demon field, And gazed upon his face; Consumption on his brow was writ, Scourge of the human race.

Consumption on his brow was writ,

Securge of the human race.

The following is respectfully recommended to the attention of all persons who write cither for the press or for their friends. There are some whose hand-writing we have had to do with, whom the description of Jeffrey's callgraphy fits almost as well as if it had been made for them:

Calgrophy of Dr. Chalmers and Mr. Jeffrey—"Pray did you ever see Jeffrey's acrawl, or the pothooks of Dr. Chalmers, of Glasgow?" "Never!" "Then you are no judge of the beauties or varieties of human writing. I've had a note of the latter laying by me these three years, and have never been able to decypher it yet, nor have I ever met with a being who could. I showed it to Professor Lee, as Arabic, written to me by the celebrated Mirza Seid Moreshedabad of Ispahan! He said at once, "I can make neither head or tail of it. But pray, madam, preserve it; its a very great curiosity." As to little Jeffrey's calgraphy, you shall hear what Mr. Willison, of Edinburgh, said to me respecting it. "Did you ever see his writing? Of all the pothooks—Lord save us, a cookmaid would have written better with a skewer? He's often aent me sheets which were actually illegible—a mass of mere up and down strokes—I could have wept to look at them. Perhaps I could make out the first letter—say it was a p, well then, all the rest was a matter of guess work; and whether it was particular, or praiseworthy, or professional, or party spirit, or periwinkle, I had to conjecture from the context. Surely never man made such a g, l, and p, as he does! And then the cantrips which his highness would occasionally play up! Often, when I had got a whole number in type, he would come down, cancel three or four articles, and leave ne as many fresh ones in their place. And times beyond number he has presented himself to me, seen the proof of a long artisele, and altered and remodelled every line of it! And then, if we made a mistake or two more than ordinary, he would fume, and rage, and fret, and talk of his time a the oil, and preparing it for receiving the glase.

It must be obvious that it is necessary to employ a glaze which is transparent, in order to give full effect to the brilliancy of the cobalt color. A little of this blue oxide is also generally mixed with the glaze, for the same purpose as laundresseaemploy smalt with their streth, viz. to increase the whiteness, by subduing any yellow tint that might otherwise impair its lutre.

Itere I cannot avoid observing, that it would be an important acquisition if a me suitable article, instead of oil, could be discovered for mixing with the colors which are employed for printing on carthen ware, and which could be of such a nature as not to sequire to be burnt off previously to the appli-employed for printing on earthen ware, and which could be of such a nature as not to require to be burnt off previously to the application of the glaze. It appears to me to be worth while to institute a series of experiments for this particular object; because, if it could be attained, what immense quantities of printed goods, besides those which are ornamented by the penoil, might be completely finished with two firings instead of three, which, on the present plan, such goods always require! Were it on no other account than the expense of this vehicle, it is desirable to find a substitute. Some of the first enamel painters think it necessary to use even the best rectified oil of amber, and this of late years has been very costly.

Another idea occurs to me respecting printed ware, which, however fanciful it may now appear, will, I doubt not, some time or other be realised. What I refer to is, the possibility of printing two or three different colors at once, like the Lancashire calico printers. This, I presume, would be a discovery of great importance to every manufacturer of fine earthen ware or porcelaig.

FOR THE NATURDAY EVENING POST.

SOCIAL HINTS.

When I see a young man, the nature of whose business imperiously demands all his attention, loitering about public houses, spending his time and money, and what is of much if not more consequence, his respectable standing in society, then I say to myself, if he does not "tack ship he will be on a lee shore, and consequently among the breakers."

When I see young married persons launching out into great extravagencies, beyond what their pecuniary affairs will admit; then I say to myself, you had better "haul aft and run closer to the wind, or you will soon and run closer to the wind, or you will soon have to make a loosing stretch to get to windward again."

When I see parents indulging their children in every thing their little fancies prompt them to desire after, then I say to myself, your children will soon be your maters; and it is very probable, should they come to years of maturity, they will be a cause of trouble to you in your old age, and by their improper conduct, "bring down your grey hairs with sorrow to the grave." grey hairs with sorrow to the grave."

PRINTED WARE.

The annexed account of the method of printed figures on ware, is from an essay on the subject of Earthen Ware and Porcelain, by Parke, an English writer, the whole of which essay may be found in that useful publication, the Boston Journal of Philosophy and the Arts.

The 'ters of England have derived great advantage from the introduction of the Printing Fre i The use of this valuable machine, which is comparatively of late date, has enabled these manufacturers to produce a greater variety of patterns and of neater execution, than could possibly be acquired at a small expenses by the pencil.

fixes it more firmly by rubbing it very hard with a piece of flannel tightly rolled up in the form of a short cylinder.

The design of this hard rubbing is to force the color into the pores of the ware. When the papers which have been thus applied have lain for about an hour, the color is generally found to be sufficiently fixed to admit of their being detached. This is effected by putting the articles into a tub of water, where the paper soon becomes soft and off by gentle friction, leaving the full impression of the pattern upon the bissout.

The papers having been removed, the ware is suffered to stand a sufficient time to become dry, and then it is put into af oven at a low heat, for the purpose of desipating the oil, and preparing it for receiving the glass.

It must be obvious that it is necessare for the surface of flannel with the serving. It must be obvious that it is necessare for the surface of fixed upon the surface of the workle-they are as fleeting as our years. Youth, sike the spring, is all

How transitory are all the enjoyments and pleasures of this world—they are as fleeting as our years. Youth, like the spring, is all gainty—and like that ward, it swiftly passes away. The young fonly may picture out a world free from this cointments and unhappiness; and, viewin, with an unfinal eye the scenes that are aron; I, feaving out all evil as a velling thorn, and realizing nothing beyond its untried and limited vision, it may promise a life rich with every enjoyment.—And like the spring, with gay young flowers promise a life rich with every enjoyment.—
And like the apring, with gay young flowers blossoming sll around, the finture may appear to wear such bidding smiles, that something may seem to express assurance to every thing the lip toe heart may ask for.—
But every apring will have a summer, that shall wither up its gay flowers, and every youth that passes on to manhood, lives but to see his wild fancy pictured but a dream.
The hope that was once bright in his heart, cold disappointment has now blasted; and the wealth, and honor, and distinction, which he had once promised himself as a birthright, he has now to struggle with the world to obtain.

he had once promised himself as a birthright, he has now to struggle with the world to obtain.

The days of youth are said to be our happiest days—and they innleed are. Our hearts are then peculiarly capable of enjoying all that is interesting and beautiful, and of loving all that is interesting and beautiful, and of loving all that is endearing and excellent. The tenderest and most generous feelings of love and friendship, and all the charities and virtues of fife, are then pure and uncontaminated. But as the spring time of our years passes away, our lives, like the summer fields, become varied by a thousand unexpected events. Life can never proceed long in an uniform train. The seeds of alteration are every day and every where sown. The silent lapse of time is ever carrying somewhat from us, until at length the period comes when all must be swept away; and the high hopes we had entertained, and the great designs we had entertained, and the great designs we had projected, will sink with us into oblision. Alas! our days are as a hand's breadth, and our age is as nothing.

But how happy must that man be, who, when the spring and summer of his days are gone by, can look back through the long retrospect of his journey without regret—and from whose bosom the cares and animosities of the world sink unperceived away, and who can look forward without disquietude to that kinged evening, which time must bring to all—who, when his eye has become dim, and his strength decayed, and on whose head the winter of age has shed its prophetic snows, can look forward with an humble hope to the benificence of God; and while his entering on that shadowy valley that leads to the abode of death, can feel the assurance that he is leaning on that hand which can comfort and save, and can conduct to those 'green pastures and these still wa ers,' where there is an eternal rest for the children of God.

ON PRAYER.

Prayer is the first breath of divine 1 fe: it is the pulse of the believing soul, the best craterion of health or sickness, vigor or debility. By prayer we draw water with joy from the wells of salvation; by prayer faith puts forth its energy, in apprehending the promised bleasings, and receiving from the Redeemer's fullness; in leaning on his Almighty arm, and making his name our strong tower; and in overcoming the world, the flesh and the devil. All other means of grace are made effectual by prayer; every doutrine and instruction produces its effect, in proportion at this is at tended to; even grace reviews or languishes, according to the same rule. Our grand conflict with Satan and our own hearts, is about prayer; the sinner feels reluctance and meets resistance, in respect to all other means of grace, that in retiring to pour out his heart before God in secret; and the believer will find his chief difficulty to consist in continuing constant and fervent in his spiritual exer-

Pine Orohard is situated in Liseene County, State of New York, about 125 miles from the City of New York, about 125 miles from the fiburishing village of Catskill, (where conveyance may be had to it at any time.) The great number of steam-boats which constantly ply up and down the North river, tend to render the facilities of access to Mus romantic and delightful spot, more certain, cheap, and expeditious. On the Pine Orchard, which is a platform of about seven acres, elevated about 3000 feet above the tides of the Hudson, the mountain house has been erceted at a great.

REENES OF THE REVOLUTION.

"The Fourth of July," said my uncle, (whose venerable appearance indicated that he could not expect to see many more of those days,) its annual return brings to my recollection the access and circumstances of my youth. "It was," soid he, "when oppression had been long endured, and the rights and privileges of the people were becoming every day more exinct, that they determined, by throwing off the yoke of tyranny, to remove the cause of their efferts against so powerful an enemy. "Such," said my uncle, as his countenance of the principles of the latter, to accomplish which they risked all they possessed; resolved by their united efforts to retrieve their situation or perish in the attempt. It was at the time of this struggle for liberty, and which gave the impulse to what is termed the Revolutionary War, that the events (the subject of what I am about to relate) had their commencement.

"The pursuits of agriculture were suspended, and the farmer appeared in the held, he grasped neither the plough or sickle, but the deadly conditions of the pursuits of agriculture were suspended, and the farmer appeared in the held, he grasped neither the plough or sickle, but the deadly conditions.

"The pursuits of agriculture were suspended," rested by the sound of voices. I listened stall and the farmer appeared in the field, he grasped neither the plough or sickle, but the deadly implements of war. He left his peaceful deelling and his lands unprotected, he ness tated not, but with a firm and fixed resolution repaired to the real-exvous, and there his rus-repaired to the real-exvous, and there his rus-test I should disturb them. I placed myself at the countenance glowed with delight, when the side of a tree from whence I could hear,

It is true, we are weak, and our enem es are strong and powerful, but how often have we heard from our good minister, that "the battle is not to the strong, nor the race to the swift. When this last sentence was uttered, I watched the countenance of the female, and I could perceive in every feature the agitation and aveiling of her soul. She involuntarily clong to his neck, and the workings of her feelings to his neck, and the workings of her feeling to his neck, and the workings of her feeling to his neck, and the workings of her feelings to his neck, and the workings of her feelings to her feeling the macket in audible sobs. He dashed from his eye a tear that had atolen upon him, hastened from her hold, and was soon lost in the woods. When the objects who were the selors of this affecting scene, had disappeared, I returned to our encampment, resolved to notice the conduct, and if possible to become acquainted with this noble in itled youth. Soon after I returned to the camp, the drom minimum of the iteration of the order to prepare for marching was passed through the ranks; the bagginge was equipped, and when the sun fad sunk in the west, the white canvass which had decembed the field, was prostrated, gathered. decerated the field, was prestrated, gathered ga shed, but replenished wan fuel, over of the night we menared to ford the eaver, and long before midnight we were land ed on the opposite shore, cautinosly proceed-ing towards the energy, and ere the dawn of day had gilded the beavers, we had surround-ed their excep. "Object of is the object of your rebellion." "Object of rebellion," says I, "perhaps you mean our measures—why, I will tell you, Master Carpenter, our determination is to destroy that slave system by which we have been so long oppressed." "Why, Jack, you and your contrades must certainly be crazy, for you will be obliged to surrender; besides, when your hay-making is done, we will then starve you out." "By the powers, Master Carpenter, we will never surrender, and as for your starving us out, we defy you, for as long as there is work to be obtained we will have it." "But, Jack, you are determined to work no more Jack, you are determined to work no more hours than from 6 to 6, and if you should have so much lessure time you will only get drunk."

"Now, Master Carpenter, as to our determination to work only from 6 to 6, we will maintain this shall be a day's work between you and I, but as to your vile remark of getting drunk, it shall receive, as it merits, our utmost contempt, and we will show that Jack Plain can be as soher as Master Carpenter; and as pelled to yield is orms bothe rehels.

MUSICAL PIDGEON OF BERTON!.

The well-known musician Ferdinand Berons, at Venice, took to petting a pigeon, one mong the few quadrupeds that can live here. This creature, by keeping his master company, obtained so perfect an ear and taste for music, that no one can doubt for a moment of the pleasure he took in hearing Mr. Bertoni play and sing for as soon as he sat down at the instrument, Columbo begins shaking his wings, perched on the pisno-forte, and expresses the most indubiable emotions of delight. If, however, he or any one else strike a note false, or make any kind of discort upon the keys, the dove never falls to shew evident tokens of anger and distress; and if teazed too long grows quite emerged; pecking the offender's legs and fingers in such a manner as to leave nothing less doubtful than the sincerity of his resentment. Bertoni declared he never knew the bird's judgment fail; and that he often kept him out of the room, for fear of his affronting or termenting those who came to take musical instructions. With regard to other actions of life, I saw nothing particular in the pidgeon but his tameness, and strong attachemotions of delight. If, however, he or any p dgeon but his tameness, and strong attach ment to his master, forthough never winged, and only clipped a very little, he never seeks to range away from the house, or quit his master's service, any more than the dove of Anacroon.

GOOD SALT.

A difference, in point of quality, greater than is generally imagined exists between salt recently manufactured, and salt which has undergone depuration, and been well drained from the brine and bittern. Recent salt is now the brine and bittern. Recent bined in a degree which can be equal or the uses of the tacle; it imparts to meats ledge. them acquiring that firmness which is essen-tial to their preservation. It is, moreover, subject to great waste during its conveyance to any distance, as it dissolves in a moist air, and runs into a liquid state. Salt which is of a good age may be distinguished from recent salt, by a taste penetrating yet free from bitterness; by the solidity of its fabric, from bitterness; by the solidity of its fabric, and by its not deliquescing when exposed to moist atmosphere

The remarks below are copied from a cotempo cary journal, and express our scutments exactly. writer's views are shown forth in a very nes and pertinent manner, and as there is much fastiowners of taste prevailing among portions of our readers, respecting the subjects treated of, we take the liberty to recommend it to their serious a " HORRID MURDER"

There is something very attractive in the above ords, and wherever they are placed in staring capitals in the columns of a newspaper, there will the eye of the reader be seen to rest. There are pitals in the columns of a newspaper, there will the eye of the reader be seen to read. There are indeed some readers who seem to delight in nothing so match, as in scenes of blood; and a paper which is barren of morders, or robberies or satisfies, or other "moving secislests by flood or field" of trages order, is thrown by, by this class of read car as "stale, flat and improfitable." With a view to administer moderately to the gratification of a cit readers, we have occasionally expired accords of maders and other crimes, but have been extremely parsimonious in the number, and stripped most of them of the bloody detail of horrors, which prehably was intended to make them most harribly mere of the stripped most of the deep compressed into the compass of its four pages; and it we entirely abeliabest all markers, aroon, robberies, Che See, which compose the entalogue of crimes which have marked the human checketer since the day "death came into the world and all our wees," we should not be faithful chromoelers of the passing tidings of the times, and our ministure entires of the world would be an innerfice son. since the day " death came into the world and all our woes," we should not be buthful chromolers of the passing tedings of the times, and our ministure estation of the world would be an imperfect copy of its original. But it is not deemed necessary in advising readers of the perpetration of indought deeds of horror to dwell on minute and aggravating circumstances tult those who read shall feel "each particular hor in dand on only," and the current of life he almost congeaded in terror. In administering this portion of our weekly allowance to readers, we shall continue as we have done, to carriess discrimination, give leading facts respecting the few we select from the great number of those which are seen in other papers, and suppress all the aggravating circumstances and high culoring which are the in other papers, and suppress all the aggravating circumstances and high culoring which are intended as alaments to a deprayed taste.

EVENING POST. PHILADELPHIA.

SATURDAY, JULY 7, 1827.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS. A number of interesting articles on file, have en waiting their turn for publication. We have at had leisure to notice the receipts of this week.

A new publication, " THE SOUVENIE," made its first appearance in the literary ranks, on Wednesday last, which being the 4th of July, it was not generally served out to subscribers. This is a work that will bear comparison, for typographical neatness and judicious arrangement, with any other that we have seen of the same kind. A gentleman tively coarse habits; the real cuxcumb is he who of considerable Literary reputation has been engaged in the editorial department, and from his qualifications for the task, we are satisfied that "the Souvenir" will not lack patronage, among the Ladies particularly, they will be pleased to learn that a part of its columns is to be devoted to the promulgation of the prevailing modes in the Fashionable world, with appropriate copperplate embellishments. A superior quarto engraving of the ALHANDRA, a Castle in Spain, accompanies the first number, with a no desire on the part of the wealthy to change the particular explanation of this ancient seat of modes, would have to resort to some less eligible Moorish splendour. The next paper is to contain a description of the Philadelphia Pushions. We observe with pleasure that the Publisher has liberally proffered his mite for the praiseworthy object of establishing the character of American Literature. human beings at any time to deek their persons in fantastie garb, to distort the shape that the God of nature has allowed humanity, to assume that of inferior animals; it is a low and grovulling ambition, betakening a deprayed taste, evincing a lamentable weakness of intellect, and if not arising from an uncultivated mind, at least, is disorganizing and depraying our best faculties -- so much for fash ion in its excess.

With many, fashion, as an object of censure, ed sists merely in the form, quantity, quality and de-sorations of dress; this is undoubtedly an extremely limited view, but in that form it is worth consideration, and if space is allowed we may find occasion to pursue some of its ramifications.

If society was constituted upon principles entireace; if nature, with a liberal hand, threw abroad her stores; if in this climate our needful food " unhedged lay open in life's common hold hade hill welcome to the wholesome feast," then indeed the principle that created artificial appetites and cutabished desires beyond the good profusely spread, would be at variance with our nature and situation would constitute an evil in itself, and would deserve the sensure which the abuse of principles is immaterial what is the extent of wealth, every dollar that sireculates, must be earned by some means; it possesses, unless in charity, a "quid proque," and in its descent from the coffers of the rich, and some of the hard hand" of the poor, though it may pay for superfluity, it rewards labor, and gives means of comfort to the indigent. It is the natural consequences of wealth, that it greates new desires, gives birth to other wants, and renders its possessor dependent upon the labor of those who malison, and with that view I had provided mysers, gives birth to other wants, and renders its possessor dependent upon the liber of those who leas upon his wealth—and this is a most salatary prevision of nature or providence—for if with the acquisition of wealth, came a diminution of expenditures; if desires ceased with the accumulation of property, in a few generations the accumulation of wealth of the earth would rust in the coffers of a few misers; and the light of life would become are few misers; and the light of life would be meant of the misers and misers are few misers. Nortait a fact, as the inconsiderate are apt to afirm, that costly dress is likely to make their res on vain; those who from infancy have been accustomed to dress in conformity to what is usually d nated the dictates of fashion, are much less unsceptible of vanity from any change, than ar me who from a long use of plain or ordinary habits, assume anddenly, and at a late period, costly raiment, with extraordinary appendages.—This is a fact which every day's experience warrants; it is rare that suppery in thresa is found among those who have seldom known the inconvenience of compara eye is smitten, and whose weak mind is turned by the novelty of a fashionable dress. But the idea may be properly, and hence profitably pursued in rarely fabricate their articles of decoration, we speak in a particular manner of females, who dresses are furnished by those of their own sex whom furture bath condemned to industry as a means of support—how many hundreds in this city obtain a respectable support by applying to the substantial parts of dress, those variations in orna-ment which constitute fashion, who, if there was means of support, and perhaps be more exposed to temptation .- Industry is not merely the parent of those who pray to be delivered from temptation and deliver themselves or others to illeness, mock beaven with petitions that their own folly defeats. conferred on ourselves, if our editorial friends employment in its fabrication : if after this exami nation it is not conceded that fashion operates as an advantage, we shall incline to the or the opponents of our doctrine prefer idleness to labour. We have heard it urged that the expensive decorations of dress being saved, a large fund for charity might come therefrom-and urged as an argument by many persons who really appear to act from good motives, and more frequent-ly ecceult the welfare of others than their own pro-2. To the writer of the best ORIGINAL POEM, of not more than 100 or less than 60 lines, tion is better than remedy, and that it is more no ble, more truly charitable to preserve from want, by affording means of industry, than to minister soffering that a want of labor has produced.

" When that the poor have eried, Omsar hath wept,"

Was the funeral praise of the Triumvir-but the more simple yet better informed Pompilius, prevented the cries of the poor, and saved his own tears, by parcelling out the land to the eitizens, and encoursging and rewarding their industry—and we would ask whether it is not better to spare a portion of wealth in encouraging the industrious, and preventing their misfortunes, than in heading subscriptions to support them in misery, or reclaim them from vice.

But we have occupied in this cassy more at than the economy of our paper will allow, while it appears to us that the subject suggests many remarks not wholly unworthy of notice; meantime let it be remembered, that it is the scripture praise of a virtuous woman that " she shall be clothed in sear-

Extract of a letter from a gentle man now on a tour for his health, to his friend in this city. I have paid neveral visits to the Virginia springs.

The first time I took the route from Philadelphia through York and Gettysburg, (Pa.) crossed the Blueridge near the Maryland line, passed by Hager's Town, (Md.) Harper's Ferry, Charles-Biservings near the Maryland line, passed by Hager's. Town, (Md.) Harper's Forry, Charleston, Winehester, Woodstock, New Market, and Harrisomburgh, and then took to the mountains. The ride from Winehester to Harrisomburgh lies along a beautiful limeatone valley, but the road is too rough to be travelled with any comfort in a carriage. A much preferable route is to take the steam boats from Philadelphia to Baltimore; and from Washington city to Fredericksburg, and thense to proceed in the stages, or in a carriage; which may be hired at the last mentioned place, to Orange Court House, Gordonsville, Charlotteville, and Staunton. At Staunton there is a very confortable two horse stage, which conveys you to the aprings. From the time you leave Fredericksburg, you become sensible that you are ascending, nevertheless, you see no mountains until you approach Orange Court House, Gorget House; on the stages, which conveys you to the aprings. From the time you leave Fredericksburg, you become sensible that you are ascending, nevertheless, you see no mountains. Mr. and Miss Wells, bullet dancers, from Artley's Amphilteetre, were introduced to the public on Samplisheetre, were introduced to the public on Samplisheetre, were introduced to the public on Samplisheeters, were introduced to the public of the until you approach Orange Court House; you have then a distant view, on your right, of the south-west mountains, so selebrated for their connexion with the name of Jefferson. The principal rock to be found in this route is a quartz, of sequention of wealth, same a dimination of expensitions are set of the executive of the exe

t part of a general or universal plan of go-ent to conform to a particular standard in the figerthin garments—for while they avoid a child; her husband was on horse back a few a coulty decorations, they are as remarkable side of the road, and the driver is and cover to give as much room as possible, ran over a pro-jecting rock, and in a moment they were over jecting rock, and in a moment they were burned. The passengers apraing from the stage, some seized the heads of the horses, while others drew the fainting sufficers through the carriage window. The hisband arrived at this awful moment, but was so much terrified as to be unable to render the smallest assistance. The lady was much ruised, but no bones broken As soon as you descend the Blueri lge, you are in the valley of the head waters of the Shenandoni-There, all is limestone. Between Waynesburough (a flourishing little town three miles went of the Bluerislge,) and Staunton, you pass through a fruitful country; fine fields of ours and eye salute you on every side. Staunton is a great thoroughface of travellers to the southward and westward, which gives it the appearance of much life, but in truth I believe there is but little business done there. They are putting up a large building, which I was inintended as an hospital for lanatics. The town is located in a valley, I suppose for the convenience of water, which is not to be had on the hills that our round it on every side. I had the pleasure there to meet Judge Tate, of Alabama, and his ludy. He nformed me, that in ancient times one of the highest of these hills was occupied by the Aberigines, the Virginia colonists, after a severe and bloody contest, and was then used by the captors for the same purpose. Around this fortress sprang up a itic scttlement. Such was the origin of Staunton.

The Drama.

PHILADELPHA—The summer season of the Chesnut street Theatre commenced on Monday evening, to a very scanty audience. If Mr. Warren wisher to obtain tolerable houses during this extreme warm weather, he must offer attractions more inviting than two farces or afterpieces—persons will not give full prices to "groun and aweat" in a theatre, when nothing more than ordinary entertainments are offered, particularly when they can be accommodated at the "other house" for half-price. Misses Warren and Jefferson have evidently much improved. Mr. Horton, from the Charleston Theatre, made his first appearance in this city, this evening, as Expersed; a character, however, we should say, not altogether in his line; he has a good voice, and appears to have an eavy and perfect acquaintance with the "cunning of the scene"—he will no doubt prove a useful member of the company. We were pleased to see an improvement in Mr. Forrest, more especially in his continue—not so with the gentleman who personated Malcour and Endless; we would, as a triend, advise him to visit the Circus, and take a few hints from the more humble performers who personate the some time of characters there. Vulgarity never will please, let it come in what shape if may—at present, he is truly a character for the Hiss-tronic art.

On Wednesday evening two new pieces were produced, The Fall of Algiers and Indian Prophecy; we did not witness the latter; the first, like most others preduced on such occasions, was rather testions and inspired—it would have been no loss had some of the songs that were introduced been omitted, several of them were not at all appropriate to the piece. Mr. Watson, a young gentleman of this city, made his debut here as Ben Brason; we could not, however, form any opinion of his nevits, as the character did not afford any scope for the exercise of talent. We must not neglect to mention the song of "Sucert Home," sung by Miss E. Jefferson. We do not profess to much however, form and Character did not afford any scope for the exercise of talen

Since writing the above we are pleased to find that the celebrated French dancers, Madame Hutin and Mons. and Mad. Achille, from the New-York Bowery Theatre, are engaged for seven nights; they are accompanied by Mr. Gilfert, the enterprising manager of the Bowery. It has been so long since there has been good dancing of any kind upon our boards, that we cannot but anticipate good houses to welcome

It is to this public festival, perhaps of all others, that we are indebted for the preservaall others, that we are instituted for the preserva-tion of those feelings of consord, and unanimity, which are excellented to hand down to posterity the senofits which we enjoy so citizens of a great and powerful Republic. In Philadelphia, the Fourth was unhered in as usual with a spirited dis-play of the Military. Several companies had previously departed on excursions of pleasure and mprovement to neighboring towns. The num ber left, however, was very respectable. After arching through different parts of the city, they repaired to Independence Square, and in presense at the mayor, and Counces, and scar or tinguished citizens, assisted in the ceremony of presenting to Capt. Conner, the sword which was voted to him by our legislature, at their last ses-sion, so a mark of respect for his distinguished Masonie Hall, and the Vanxiall Gardens were crowded with citizens, who repaired there to partake of the enterminments provided for their enjoyment. In addition to the accidents noted in another part of the paper, which occurred on the 4th, during the storm, we learn, that large parties of ladies and gentlemen, much the largest number of the former, were enjoying the breeze at Red Bank a few miles below the city. They had no shelter, no place of retreat, but stood exposed to the wind, and the torgents of water which fell from the heavens, in perfect helplessness.

"Near these gardens, and hard by the river side, there is a green meadow, a place rendered memorable by circumstances of deep and touching interest. On this spot were massacred some of the werethed six times of the Revolution. The prophed Lyons, with a just sensibility, have named it "The field of sorrow," "Camp de la douteur." "A hody of the citizens were carried forth to this place, conducted by the Gendarmerie. In crossing the budge they were counted over, and being found to exceed the allotted number by two persons, the commanding ted number by two persons, the commanding officer, Vallot, was informed of the circumstance, and was asked, 'whether two should be saved ? and in such a case, which two? He replied, what matter is it? who cares for He replied, what matter is it? who cares for two, more or jess? If they go to day, they do not go to-morrow.' They proceeded therefore, and 210 men, accompanied by these two fill-fated beings, whom acciding thad involved, in the massacre were conducted to death. Their hands were tied behind them, and they were bound to a cable, passed from tree to tree, along a range of tall willows; the solvers were drawn uniform concept inc. tree, along a range of tall willows; the solders were drawn up in me opposite line, with two pieces of srullery. At the appointest signal, their limbs blew in every direction. Those who were wounded, but yet not released from the cable cried out to their butchers to finish their work; and they did an without delay, with the bayonet and sabre. Their number was such as to render the work of butchery long and faigueing; many were left breathing and palpitating in the agonies of death, and next morning many. many were left breating and paramating and the agonies of death, and next morning many, still alive, were buried with the dead, by those who came out to pillage and who threw time on them, 'still quick and alive,' Such is the narrative of a Frenchman. Alas,' the french have many, very many such massacres to relate; blond which ages of peace and pentence will not wash away. We saw the spot where the trees had sood. They are now cut down, and replaced by monumental stones, to the memory of those who perished.

A common tradition attributes the black line, or cross upon the shoulders of the ass, to the blow inflicted by Balaam; in allusion to which, a withing, who had been irreverently succeing at the miracles, in the presence of Dr. Parr, asid triumphantly, "Well Doctor, what say you to the story of Balaam's ass, and the cross upon its shoulders !" "Why, Sir," replied the Ductor, "I say, that if you had a lettle mote of the cross, and a great deal less of the ass, it would be much better for you."

GIVING QUARTER.

GIVING QUARTER.

This phrase originated from an agreement between the Dutch and Spaniards, that the ranson of an officer or soldier should be a quarter of his pay, hence, "to be quarter" was to offer a quarter of their pay for their safety; and, "to refuse quarter," was not to except that compensation as a ranson.
